Registration starts for exhibitors at interpack 2026

Inspired by the great success of interpack 2023, concrete planning for the trade fair's next edition scheduled for 07 to 13 May 2026 is under way. About two years before the start of the trade fair, the registration phase has now officially begun. This gives companies from all over the world the opportunity to secure a place at the industry's leading trade fair.

From start-ups to global corporations: no business is too small or too large to be part of this unique event. In 2026, interpack will continue to bring together the global processing & packaging industry and become a driving force for the industry's future topics.

For seven days, the entire value chain of the industry will be represented – from packaging machines and processing technology, packaging supplies, packaging materials and packaging aids, the production of packaging supplies, converting and printed packaging, marking technology and labelling up to warehousing, logistics and transport technology. There are products and services for all types of application industries: food, beverages, confectionery and bakery, pharma, cosmetics, non-food and industrial goods.

interpack and components, the parallel trade fair for the industry's suppliers, last year welcomed 2,809 exhibitors from 61 countries. And 95 percent of them want to come back. One reason is that interpack is always about "big business": 82 percent of the visitors are top managers involved in investment decisions.

The waiting list for the world's largest trade fair of the industry is traditionally long, so early booking is an advantage. Starting on 20 March, exhibitors can register online and reserve their desired booth. interpack 2026 will take place from 7 to 13 May at the Düsseldorf Trade Fair Centre. All halls will be available again. The new assignment of halls according to sectors of the industry, which was introduced at the
